Kensington quilt: making money, joining neighbors

A new source of revenue
for schools

By ROBERTA ALEXANDER

KENSINGTON — Kensington's quilt project is expected to raise a lot of money for the school, but it's also bringing neighbors together.

"We had a lot of women come in and say, 'I've never done this before, I can only stay two hours,' and three hours later they're still there," project organizer Martha Vlahos said.

Vlahos, a recent convert to quilting, had the idea for the project after seeing quilts made by other school groups.

In the vice-president of the Kensington School PTA. It's hard to raise money for the school, she said. "I can only stay two hours," and three hours later they're still there," project organizer Martha Vlahos said.

Both Thousand Oaks and Cragmont schools do quilt projects as fundraisers, and Vlahos was inspired by the estimated $7,000 raised last year by the Cragmont quilt project. She called a few women with quilting experience together for a meeting last June, and the project began.

Although it will benefit the school, it will also benefit the community.

Pension crisis brings call for court battle

Council told legal challenge is 'unrealistic'

By JUDY POLUMBAUM

ALBANY — The committee studying Albany's pension problems was urged last week to challenge a 14-year-old court decision which has forced the city to pay out far more in pension benefits than its pension fund can support.

James Cleveland, in a presentation to the Pension Advisory Committee last Thursday, traced Albany's pension troubles to the Newhouse decision of 1969.

The chief effect of that ruling was to tie pension payments to salaries of current employees holding the same rank, rather than actual salaries at the time of retirement.

Since salaries have risen steadily with inflation, pensioners as a result may receive substantially more than they earned as salaried city employees.

Cleveland, a Standard Oil chemist who said his analysis of the city's pension problems had caused him three sleepless nights, declared that the Superior Court ruling — upheld by a state Court of Appeals and never appealed further — had "imposed an impossible obligation on the city."

Suggesting the courts could not have foreseen the economic consequences of their action, Cleveland said, "A court got us into this problem and only a court will get us out."

However, this time many parties will be watching.

City Attorney Robert Zweben later said the idea of protesting the Newhouse decision is not realistic.

"It's impossible to go back and reopen a final appellate court decision," he said.

However, he added, the city could try to lessen the impact of the decision by altering the City Charter. And he predicted that any such action would be subject to legal challenge by members of the fire and police departments.

Council: time for a raise?

By JUDY POLUMBAUM

ALBANY — Are Albany City Council members entitled to a raise after half a century without a cost-of-living increase?

The council recently contemplated the idea of a City Charter amendment providing more compensation than the amount set in 1927. Currently each council member gets $5 a week and a maximum of $25 a month — contingent on their attendance at weekly council meetings.

However, members also are entitled to the fringe benefit of inclusion in a city employees' health plan.

Mayor Ruth Ganong proposed the idea of a raise during a discussion with the city's Charter Review Committee. The committee, after completing reviews of civil service and pension matters, had asked the council for direction on where to concentrate its efforts now.

Vice Mayor William Johns argued that an increase in council pay might encourage people who otherwise could not afford to spend time on city affairs to run for office. "We put a bias in our system in favor of rich people," he said.

Johns also suggested that council members who are insured by their own employers and have no use for the health plan benefit should be offered the option of more money.

Cancer not linked to county industry

By DON MCCORMACK

A major state study has concluded that cigarette smoking, not industrial pollution, is the primary cause of the high incidence of lung cancer in the industrial sections of Contra Costa County.

"We found no relationship between ambient air pollution and lung cancer," Dr. Donald Austin, director of the study, said Friday.

Austin is chief of the Resource for Cancer Epidemiology of the state Department of Health Services. He headed the study, which has been under way about five years and cost about $700,000. The final part is expected to be completed in July.

El Cerrito Mayor Jean Siri, a long-time critic of local oil refineries, challenged the study's conclusions.

Siri said a Los Angeles study, using the same approach, contradicted Austin's findings. She also said that Austin, by concentrating on present emissions, might have overlooked the effects of older emissions.

Pollution laws have greatly reduced the amount of emissions in recent years. Many of the approximately 800 people studied have worked in industrial Contra Costa for decades and therefore were exposed to the heavier emissions.

Michael Belliveau, research associate with Citizens for a Better Environment, a San Francisco-based group that has been critical of the study, said its conclusions were "not surprising."

Belliveau said the "study doesn't lend credence to industry's belief that there is no connection between toxic air pollution and cancer."

He called the study "limited" because it "only looked at a small portion of the pollutants that are found in the urban atmosphere."

"Is smoking killing the workers?" Belliveau asked, "or is working killing the smokers? That question hasn't really been answered."

Kiwanis breakfast benefits young, old

EL CERRITO — The El Cerrito-Albany Kiwanis Club will hold its second annual fundraising pancake breakfast on Sunday, Jan. 30, from 7 a.m. to noon at St. John's School auditorium, 11156 San Pablo Ave., El Cerrito.

Proceeds will be divided between the St. John's Senior Center in El Cerrito and the St. John's Narrow Door Youth Group.

In addition to a menu of pancakes, sausage, eggs, coffee and milk served by Narrow Door youths, an added attraction will feature a raffle. First prize will be a weekend for two to four persons at a South Lake Tahoe condominium. Second prize is a $50 Mechanics Bank savings bond. Third prize is a dinner for two at Walker's Pie Shop in Berkeley. There also will be additional surprises.

Nancy Gans, director of the Senior Center, said that the Senior's share of the proceeds will be spent for Dial-A-Ride, cabinets for craft storage, and stamps for get-well letters to ill members. The Center provides handicrafts, exercises, speakers, travel slides, and exercising as well as Lucille Granucci's home cooked meals every Tuesday.

The Narrow Door Youth Group is composed of ninth to 12 grade boys and girls from Presentation, Salesian, St. Mary's, El Cerrito, Kennedy, and Holy Names High Schools. Their primary aim is to help people in their communities. Last year, their efforts provided a kidney dialysis machine for a year to a good neighbor and food for the needy through the Richmond Food Pantry.

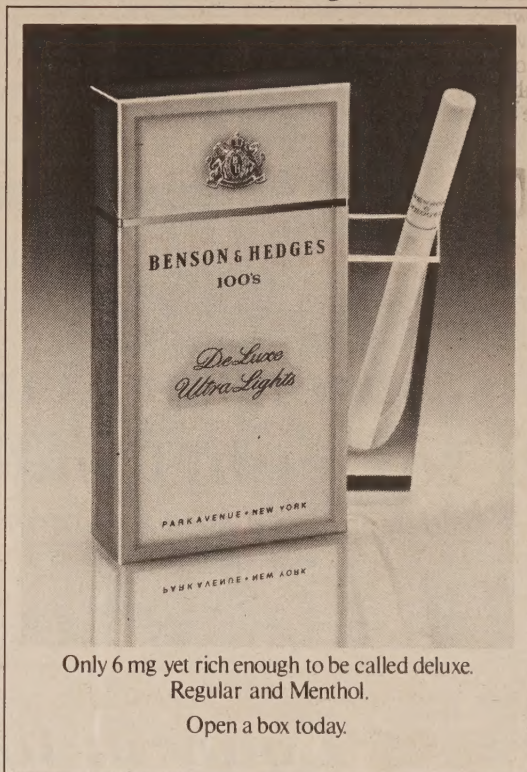

Busbin and Kathy Delemos, youth ministers to the group, said that the organization now will be provided with needed audio visual aids through the breakfast fund-raiser. Also more students will be able to attend retreats and other group affairs which they could not otherwise afford.

Tickets for the breakfast will be available at the door or can be obtained from club members. Cost is $2.50 for adults and $1 for children through age 10.

For further information, call Kiwanis Club chairman, Jim Rose, Albany, 526-1562; or Kiwanis president, George Chin, Albany, 527-4927.

Kensington quilts for school fun

the project is a community effort, not a PTA one.

What Vlahos, Mabry Benson, Dorothy Kaplan and Tudy Gooding came up with was a quilt based on images of Tilden Park. They thought the park offered more scope than the more common alphabet or animal blocks.

In the fall the organizing committee made a series of visits to classrooms at Kensington School, describing the quilt project to the children, and asking for artwork based on something in Tilden Park. Within a few weeks, they had many pictures to choose from.

They selected 14 drawings, each of which was adapted and applied on a 12-inch block by a volunteer seamstress. They were Vivian Baas (a visiting student from Norway), Judy Alley, Jean Stenquist, Betty Anne Engel and Julie Beckford (visiting from England).

Also, Lily Suarez, Ann Ariyoshi, Carolyn Binger, Anna Mae Morrish, Dee Lawrence (former Kensington School secretary), Marcia Osborn, Kay Flink, Donna Cramer and Marge Smeltzer.

The large center block was designed by D.D. vanLobenSels, and sewn by Vlahos, Gooding, Kaplan and Irene Smith.

The finished quilt will be 78 by 64 inches. Each block is pale blue, and the blocks are separated by lattice strips of a darker grayish blue with a small print in it. The lattice strips also border the quilt, along with a cranberry red strip.

"They are my favorite colors," said Vlahos, who helped shop for them.

Fabric, batting and quilt backing were donated by Poppy Fabric.

Organizers selected combatible colors from their own collections, and these were used to the 14 women who made the blocks. The finished quilt then sewn together in strips, and the top pinned and the backing.

Then the quilting began. Estimates that by mid-February hours had been contributed approximately 30 quilting hours. Other experienced quilters instructed the novices.

The completed quilt was played at the Kensington School from March 7 to 18, and from April 4 to 15, at the Corners from April 18 to 25.

Raffle tickets, at $1.00, be available at Kensington from students or from 526-9377, or Roz Plaster. The quilt will be raffled at school's carnival in May.

Albany council: 50 years, no re

The idea of increasing council pay drew some criticism from committee members, however. "I think historically, people have gone into politics for the prestige of it, the publicity of it," remarked Martha Hood, "and they don't go into it for the money they get out of it."

And council member Henry Kruse asserted it was an inappropriate topic, given the budgetary problems cities are facing. "I don't think that's the thing to be talking about seriously now," he said.

Kruse also suggested raising council pay would not have much effect on the council's socio-economic composition because any increase would be "nominal."

State law allows council members to receive a maximum of $150 a month for their city work.

Council members asked the committee to look at a variety of other charter matters, from general "housekeeping" which would eliminate outdated language and obsolete provisions to provisions which would give the city expanded power to raise money through bonds.

City Administrative Officer William Haden has recommended using revenue bonds to help finance development of the waterfront.

Haden said the fact that the charter does not allow the city to sell bonds without a two-thirds majority vote contradicts state law and hampers the city's ability to finance development.

"It really puts us at a competitive disadvantage with other cities," he said. "It also allows us not to be able to do some things that we probably should be doing."

The idea of charter make the posts of police attorney and city auditor elected to appointed after the discussion.

This idea has been many times in the past. Voters just last year rejected a proposal which would have treasurer an appointee.

Council member McManus suggested that looking at specific points should review the administrative structure as a whole.

Johns agreed, saying the presence of an elected treasurer appointed finance director resulted in "two departments ought to be combined."

Study says Contra Costa cancer rate is not linked to industry

Dr. Robert Swencicki, medical director for Chevron Occupational Health, said he was satisfied with Austin's results.

"It certainly seems his (Austin's) conclusions are reasonable in light of the data he presented," Swencicki said.

Chevron has hired a private consultant to study the causes of death among employees over the last 30 years, he said. The study will concern the company's refineries in Richmond and in El Segundo, the two largest on the West Coast, and Chevron Chemical and Chevron Research in Richmond. Preliminary results should be ready this summer, Swencicki said.

Commissioned in 1978, the state study owed its existence to a previous report that disclosed a lung cancer in Contra Costa and many other industries in the United States.

Contra Costa is the most industrialized of the nine counties and contains the refineries — Chevron's Pacific in Hercules, and Rodeo — as well as a smaller petrochemical plant.

Preliminary work revealed that the lung cancer among local industrial workers running 40 percent higher than the rest of the county's figure, after statistical adjustment was reduced to 27 percent, a significant disparity.

Among the cancer victims 97 percent of the men compared to 72 percent of the residents, Austin said. Averaged out, the men smoked 1.4 packs a day, the study said.

Austin said smoking rates for the entire 27 percent. The 27 percent figure was data compiled over eight years, 21 percent came from data between May 1980 to July 1981. Austin said that more surveys show the second study was the first.

Albany pension crisis: court action urged ments covered by the municipal pension plan. In that sense, Zweben said, a major reform of the pension system would involve dealing with the courts. Albany's pension system covers public safety employees hired up to mid-1971; those hired since are covered by the Statewide Public Employees Retirement System. To fund the old system, the City Charter requires 9 percent of the withheld from employee salaries with a sliding amount provided by the city. But as contributions diminished while payouts have increased, the city has had to inject more money into the pension fund — a total of $1.3 million since 1968.

With pension obligations continuing to mount while assets decline, the city has had to confront the possibility that the fund could run dry. This prospect led to the creation of the Pension Advisory Committee last Cleveland's presentation to the committee last week ended by City Council members and staff as well as representatives of fire and police.

Cleveland insisted that the city's pension problems do not have to be a "political" issue and that city officials and employees can work together to solve them. However, a reaction made it clear that any move which might diminish pensioners' benefits would face stiff opposition from present and future beneficiaries.

Using charts tacked up on the walls of City Council chambers, Cleveland elaborated on oft-repeated warnings the pension system is headed for bankruptcy unless reforms are made.

An actuarial study for the city last summer showed that with no new infusions, pension fund assets would run out about 1990. But Cleveland figures the fund would go bankrupt sooner.

He said the city now faces an "unfunded liability" — the pension obligations which it lacks the funds to meet — of at least $10 million. City pension obligations, according to his calculations, will peak at $83 million around year 2017. But fund assets now total only $2.2 million.

If the city decided to allow the pension fund to grow it was sufficient to cover all obligations, turning to voters to subsidize pension benefits in the meantime, owners would be paying hefty taxes for the next three decades, Cleveland said.

Under the scheme he envisioned, the owner of the average $85,000 home would have to shell out a total of $13,000 from 1983 to 2014, while the owner of a $125,000 home would have to pay $19,504. This would raise a total of some $5 million dollars over the 32 years, by which time the pension fund could grow through earnings to some $32.2 million, or just about enough to cover remaining obligations.

Cleveland mused that perhaps he should have sold his house and left town after coming up with these figures. "I didn't," he added. "The way I see this, we're all in together."

Having described the problem, Cleveland laid blame on the Newhouse decision, which he said had "radically changed the economics of the pension system."

He illustrated this with the example of a city employee earning a final salary of $20,000 a year with a pension of one-third to two-thirds of salary. Before 1969, this employee would be expected to collect a total of $270,000 to $360,000 in the duration of his lifetime. After the ruling, the employee would collect $873,000 to $1,166,000.

It was not for the Newhouse decision, the city's pension would be solvent and have $3.5 million in reserves, Cleveland said.

He emphasized that, in attacking the results of the Newhouse decision, he did not mean to attack the city's employees. "One of the good things about this town is you need the police and fire (departments), they're right there," he said.

But he added that if the city stayed on the same road, it would be "disastrous."

Cleveland said that, although he is not a lawyer, he was the Newhouse decision has imposed an illegal "pyramidal" debt obligation on the city and changed an original contractual understanding between the city and its employees that pensions were to be based on final salary.

He expressed faith that a court would dispense justice to those concerned, saying, "I don't think that the court will allow the city to go bankrupt; I don't think that the court will allow the retirees to go without a pension."

Happy New Year, Chinese style

As the Year of the Boar hastens our way, it provides us the incentive to venture into the Chinese kitchen once again. With pleasure, as far as I'm concerned, cause the cuisine of the Orient (and China especially) is one of my favorites.

Cooking Chinese style means cooking in basically five methods: sauteing, red cooking (stewing with soy sauce), deep frying, steaming, and roasting (barbecuing and grilling). Of course, there are many variations, but for the most part, these are the main categories. They're really not so different because we use these techniques in some manner in our cuisines. It's the unique ingredients and the distinctive flavors derived from them that make the cuisine different. The preparation of the ingredients is another unique aspect. The actual cooking time is generally very brief, but the preparation of the foods — mainly the cutting — is what takes most of the cook's time.

It is important because it determines not only the appearance of the dish, but the length of time it must cook. Generally, Chinese dishes are made up of foods which have been cut so that they cook together and quickly at that. It was based on the fact that fuel for cooking was scarce in China. Little pieces are also easy to pick up with chopsticks. Very much like the question of the chicken and the egg, I've never figured out which came first — the little pieces of food or the chopsticks. It's unimportant anyway, but they need each other!

Cutting tips

When cutting strips of meat, be sure to cut across the grain for tenderness. Cutting also is much easier if the meat is lightly frozen.

As for vegetables, tender ones such as green onions can be cut straight across. Firmer ones such as celery should be cut diagonally, exposing more area to heat and tenderizing. My good friend and advisor, Chinese chef Jerry Chin chuckles that all commercial cooks know this, but to those who don't cook Chinese.

When stewing or braising, meat is generally cubed at 1½ inches. To saute or fry, meats and vegetables are sliced, shredded, diced, and minced.

To the Chinese cook, a Chinese knife (which looks like a cleaver) is the all-purpose tool. It does all the cutting as well as the tenderizing. When turned on its side and slapped flat on a slice of meat, for instance, it flattens a too-thick slice as well as breaks the connective tissue for tenderizing. It is also very good for transferring ingredients from one place to another. Harry cautions that referring to this knife as a cleaver may encourage us to use it as one. In reality, the Chinese knife comes in several sizes, and while it is shaped as a cleaver, the smaller ones must not be used for cutting bones at all, but as the marvelous slicing tool it is. For the novice in oriental cuisine, a good chef's knife will be quite adequate.

To wok or not to wok

If you are a beginner, don't feel you have to have a wok in order to cook well. This is a marvelous 2-handled pan that is one of the traditional cooking utensils of this cuisine. If you have one, that's great. If not, use a good skillet. OK, so I'm not a purist. I've been using my electric frypan since my wok disappeared in last year's move. Harry puts it this way: It's great to play tennis in white shorts, but you can still play a good game in cut-off jeans. (I like the way he thinks as well as they way he cooks!)

Unfamiliar ingredients

Going through Asian food stores is a great experience. Reading labels and marvelling at the strange vegetables in cans and in the food bins is very interesting. But when it is time to cook, most of us tend to stick to ingredients we are familiar with. But — it can be exciting to try one or two new ingredients or prepare a familiar food in a different way. Take eggs, for instance. Many of us use hard boiled eggs or stuff them for hors d'oeuvres. Try Marbelized Tea Eggs sometime. Pile them high in a bowl at your next party. They look so intriguing and will prove the most talked about hard boiled eggs you'll ever serve. If you want to go all out, take Harry's advice and get tiny quail eggs. Otherwise, buy the smallest eggs your market carries.

Marbelized Tea Eggs

- 1 dozen hard cooked eggs, unpeeled
- 4 t. salt
- 3 T. soy sauce
- ½ t. whole anise seed
- 4 black tea bags

After the eggs are hard boiled (cool rapidly in ice water), roll them on a hard surface to crack the shells, but DO NOT peel.

In a saucepan, combine 1 qt. cold water with the salt, soy, anise and tea bags. Add the eggs and bring to a boil. Reduce heat to simmer for 1 hour. Cover and set aside to cool for an additional hour and then refrigerate overnight.

To serve, drain eggs and carefully remove the shells. The tea mixture will have seeped in through the cracks and made an interesting marbelized effect on the eggs.

Do you want to have a sort of Chinese menu and want to serve a salad? Chinese don't do this, of course, but we can with this dish that complements almost any meat dish.

Cucumber Sprout Salad

- 3 cucumbers, pared
- 1 lb. bean sprouts
- ¼ c. soy sauce
- 2 T. wine vinegar
- 1 T. salad oil
- 2 T. sesame oil (important for distinctive flavor)
- 1 t. sugar

Energy rally gains support

On Friday, Jan. 28 there will be a pot-luck supper in the fellowship hall of the church beginning at 6:30 p.m. Following the meal Kenneth Kinney will present a visual program with live sound entitled "Southern Scene from Lexington to Nashville."

Crab feed benefit: Issei housing

EL CERRITO — An "all you can eat" crab and spaghetti feed to benefit East Bay Issei Housing, Inc., will be held on Sunday, Feb. 6, from 4 to 7 p.m., at the El Cerrito Community Center, 7007 Moeser Lane.

Tickets are $15 per person, with a discount price of $12 for citizens over 65 years, and children, 12 years and under.

The menu, consisting of crab, spaghetti, green salad, rolls, dessert and drinks, will be served by volunteers from member organizations. Sake will be provided by Numano Sake Co.

East Bay Issei Housing, (EBIH), is the recipient of a Housing and Urban Development (HUD) award of nearly $5.6 million in a long-term, low interest loan. One hundred units of mixed studios and one bedroom apartments will be constructed on a 3.3 acre site in Hayward, scheduled for completion in August, 1984.

EBIH is now trying to raise $200,000, to provide balconies, a kitchen for the main dining area, and office space for the social service program; as well as to pay off the loans on the Channing Way House, a facility for the frail Japanese-speaking elderly, purchased by EBIH in March, 1982.

In addition to the crab feed, EBIH will also be soliciting $1 donations for a raffle to benefit the housing project. First prize for the raffle will be $1,000; 2nd prize, $500; and third prize, $250. Winners names will be drawn at 6:30 p.m. at the crab feed.

For further information, call co-chairpersons June Sakaoguchi (235-8625) or Grace Goto (223-2586). For tickets to the crab feed, and/or raffle, please call East Bay Japanese for Action (848-3560), and leave a message for Laura.

Watch out for sirens

Alameda County and participating municipal jurisdictions will test disaster warning sirens at 11 a.m. on Friday, Jan. 28. This test is held every three months.

In Alameda County the Office of Emergency Services conducts these tests to insure that the sirens are operable. Volunteers will check Alameda County's sirens operation and report any that fail the test.

The test will use a steady one minute sound, followed by one minute silence, and concluding one minute of rising and falling sound.

The bard comes to Albany

ALBANY — Vista College is again offering "Drama through the Eyes of Shakespeare," a tuition-free course, on Wednesdays from 1 to 4 p.m., at the Albany Senior Center, on Masonic Avenue near Solano.

The course, which begins Feb. 2 and runs through Feb. 8, will be taught by Louis Bohlen, an El Sobrante resident who teaches Vista classes in composition, English for non-native speakers and a course in California writing.

For more information, call the senior center at 644-1010.

Students will read "Henry IV, Part I," "The Merry Wives of Windsor," and "King Lear," he said. And they'll watch the BBC productions of the plays and use BBC or Vista College study guides as aids.

Bohlen first gave the class in Albany last summer and it was "extremely well received," with an average attendance of 16.

Besides the readings and the televised plays, he has students walk through some of the scenes of the plays, to get a feel for acting. Last summer, the class also was able to watch a live performance of "Hamlet" at the Berkeley Shakespeare Festival, he said.

Bohlen, a former newspaper reporter and public relations writer, also has taught at UC-Berkeley, where he worked as a field linguist and researcher on the western dialect section of "The Linguistic Atlas of the United States and Canada."

"I approach Shakespeare from two points," Bohlen said. "It should instruct and entertain. As a theatre critic in Shakespeare's time said, 'the purpose of the theatre is to please and delight.'"

Berkeley Ski Club: calling all Bay Area skiers

Still going strong after 30 years

By STEVE TADY

The Berkeley Ski Club has been around for 30 years, and although membership is down a little, the club is still strong and stable.

"We were up to about 100 people, but some were sort of transient. We have 65 members now, and they are more stable, more permanent members," membership chairman Robert Scharpf said.

The club is for adults over 21, and members are scattered everywhere in the Bay Area. "We have people from Palo Alto to Sacramento," Scharpf said.

Sports

To join the club would cost $150, a one-time fee that gives members full benefits, which include inexpensive lodging rates at the club's lodge in North Tahoe City. "Our real mission is to make skiing least expensive as possible," Scharpf added.

And have some fun, too. The club meets the first Tuesday of every month to discuss upcoming trips. Meetings are held at the Live Oak Center, on the corner of Shattuck and Berryman in north Berkeley. The club also has a party every month, the third Tuesday of each month.

Each meeting is open for new members, but to join the club, you have to spend a weekend at the lodge and attend at least two club functions. "We aren't really screening people. We just want to make sure that they like what they are getting into," Scharpf said.

If you don't want to become a full member right away, a $50 fee will make you a social member, which entitles you to all the benefits, but the lodge fees will be slightly higher.

The Berkeley Ski Club is an incorporated non-profit organization, and they own the lodge, just off highway 89 in North Tahoe City. So the annual $50 club dues help pay the mortgage on the lodge. "When you are a full-member, you become part owner of the lodge forever," said Scharpf.

The lodge can hold up to 28 people, but 20 is the usual, more comfortable number for weekend trips. The lodge is also available for weekday trips, but the cook only works on weekends.

With the rise of cross-country skiing, Scharpf has found that more people have become interested in cross-country skiing and says that about one-third of the members do a lot of cross-country skiing.

"It's less expensive and it's a nice adventure out in the snow," Scharpf said.

For more information on the Berkeley Ski Club, call Robert Scharpf at 486-3156.

Opening lead: ♦ Q

By Oswald Jacoby and James Jacoby

As soon as dummy hit the table, South reached over and played the king. East took his ace and then cashed his ace of spades. He returned a diamond to West's jack. West had no problem in finding the lead of another diamond and the ruff had sent another iron-clad game to Davy Jones' locker.

The hand caused a lot of discussion, mostly of a vitriolic nature. North pointed out in the line one of the "vulnerable" South had simply ducked the first diamond, then the ironclad game would have sailed home.

South replied that anyone could have made that play after seeing all the cards. But that if West's lead had been queen from queen-jack doubling, the South play would have been the loser.

West tried to pour oil on troubled waters by complimenting his partner's play of the ace of spades before the diamond, but merely got grunts from North and South.

We agree that the best percentage play by South would have been to duck, but what to play on the 12th? South's real guilt is in not thinking about that first play before making it.
